Learning Points

Demonstrative Adjectives This and That

Demonstrative adjectives point something out. You use this when something is close. You use that when something is far.

The demonstrative adjective goes in front of the noun.

this + noun (this book) or that + noun (that store)

|                                      | Demonstrative Adjective | Example                                             |
|--------------------------------------|-------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------|
| near(here)                       | this (book) here        | This lemon ice cream here is interesting.    |
| far(there/over there/back there) | that (book) over there  | That coffee ice cream back there looks good. |

You make the negative form by adding not after the verb.

Examples:

- That shop over there is not expensive.
- This one here does not have cheaper food.
- This one here is strawberry mango.
- That one at the back is mocha crunch!
